This is a kinetic puzzle game where all the excitement comes from having to figure out how to get a ball bouncing around through each level. In each level you need to be the ball, or at least an obstacle that the ball can pass through. You can press any key to restart the level, this restarts both the ball and all you. There's unlimited levels of challenges. You can play with the pressure sensitivity (less presses mean less ball speed) and the size of the ball (smaller ball slower). At the end of each level there's the option to set a score and see your final rank. Features: Randomly generated levels Audio based puzzles 5 Levels and counting (though the count of levels is not fixed) Automatic restart functionality Press any key to restart Full keyboard support Mouse wheel required Press U to turn on/off Vibration Sound on, no sound required (these are all the music tracks from the game, there are no other audio files in the game) Touch controls available on android 3.0+ phones FAQ: Q: Will it work with the stock Android keyboard? No it won't. Q: Why do I have to restart the game every time I restart the level. When you restart the level all the balls are restarted. You could play the level for 2 minutes and you may have one ball reach a "stasis" point where its held still and doesn't move in the level. I think the balls should only rest at those points. Q: How do I play the levels? At the end of each level there's the option to set a score and see your final rank. 1: Press 'r' 2: Press 'r' again 3: Press 'r' again 4: Press 'r' again Q: Does the game crash if I don't have sound on? Nope, it doesn't. Q: Is the game hard? Yes. Q: Is the game very easy? It's hard, yes. Q: Is the game very hard? Yes. Q: Do I get some extra points for clearing the first level within a short time? Nope, I shouldn't. It

8.5/10 Story: 8.5/10 Controls: 8.5/10 Replay Value: 8.5/10 Sound/Music: 8.5/10 Gameplay: 8.5/10 Graphics: 8.5/10 Setting: 8.5/10 Game Length: 8.5/10 Final Verdict: 8.5/10 Machine Made: Rebirth is a great game that many of us RPG fans have been waiting for some time. The game plays like a Final Fantasy or Deus Ex game, with the menus focusing on the story and gameplay experience, and with a great world to explore filled with secrets and a great story, this game is a must have for fans of RPGs. The Following User Says Thank You to The king of games For This Useful Post: RE: Machine Made Rebirth Superficial Gameplay Machine Made: Rebirth is a game in many ways, but then it is also a game in other ways. The user interface is quite simple and easy to play. It is more or less a masterpiece of the genre, it has many aspects of RPG games and features of other genres, and which is why it is very special and truly worth the purchase. On the other hand, the game itself is rather formulaic. The plot has some very classic elements, and there is nothing new or original to say about the world and the people that inhabit it. Nothing really surprising, nothing too ambitious or exciting and nothing original at all. After completing the game, I was impressed with the plot and how it was expanded, so I expected more from this title. The game is quite short, it was just not enough, but it was more than enough for me. The graphics are a good job, the characters are well designed, and the art direction was really admirable, they are really original and take you to very interesting places, but ultimately they were a bit too simple and static, or maybe they just didn't move much, there are just too many graphics, too many animations, too many animations that do not make the game but make it boring. The lighting was good at most places, but then I began to notice that there were many areas where the shadows went almost all black. I hope you will not find a problem with the lighting in the game, but I do hope that the developers will have addressed this issue. Machine Made: Rebirth has many sound effects that can sometimes be quite annoying and create dissonance

Quotes From The Community - House Fortifications Certain types of terrain have specific bonuses that are applied automatically when a map starts. In addition to the existing terrain bonuses, spells have a grid-based bonus, like range, that does not change, unless there is a separate terrain type in the row between the two circles. A special type of terrain is “double”, which adds a second terrain type in the row on top of the one beneath it. This reduces the spot count for that row unless you have floor 0 terrain in each spot in the row, or a double ceiling if the double terrain is floor 1 and the terrain in the row below it is floor 0, or a table’s top if the terrain in the row below is a table’s top. You can add terrain to the top row: just multiply spot count by 1.4. I’ll add a graph soon to make it clear that any spot of top row terrain is worth 1.4 more normal spot count. You can balance the spot count across various terrain types by adding top row terrain (which is worth 14 more spot count than regular terrain) and/or flat bottom row terrain (the most valuable terrain is with 1,-2, and -2 terrain in order of decreasing value). Base and Double Ceiling terrain can’t be added to the top row. As of this release, spells only count the terrain at their feet, not their tops or bottoms. This primarily affects below-ground flying creatures and ship ceilings. Note, however, that all double ceilings are treated as floor 1, or as water if no creature can pass through. That means that if two of a double ceiling’s cells have 1,-2 or -2 terrain, a creature passing through will have a spot count bonus as if it is a single ceiling with a grid of 24.5 or 1.4, except that the grid can be adjusted, resulting in an 18% increase. This gives below-ground troops and ships a decent aerial advantage. Plants Plants grow at 24 SP/m<sup>2</sup>, or 20 SP/m<sup>3</sup> if there is one in a double (or no double) above the row. The 1,2,2 extra SP/m<sup>2</sup> costs I put on plants can be traded for extra gold, an extra team, a spot count bonus, or similar. The 1 SP/m<sup>3</sup> cost for an extra double is more
