We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. -- Declaration of Independence, 1776 Welcome to the DC Blogs Welcome to the "Homes of Yesterday and To-day" blog. As we journey through the era of the American Revolution, we will stop at sites from all over the United States, posting about what was going on in the lives of the "people who lived here" at that time. We will try to give our readers a time-line of events that will help them to understand the time-line of events that happened in the colonies of the time. Also, we will give you a time-line of where to go to learn more about the American Revolution. Thursday, November 1, 2015 1066. Eleven hundred and twenty, 1159, 1178. In this year St. Edmund, after the death of King Algar the pugnacious, was appointed king. And he was a good and wise man, unambitious for pomp or power, and ruled with justice and moderation, according to the common laws, and to his own conscience. He was as valiant in battle as in arms, and an invincible and unfailling leader; he lived a long and excellent life, and left behind him a name that will endure for all time. We are shown here by Merlin that King Arthur's son is not one of the best kings that have ever lived, and he reigns for only a short while. These are the times when our Republic was formed, but it seems we are having a resurgence of the sort of thing that has been going on for hundreds of years, rebellions and all. We will have to live through that to get our independence again. It was not easy, but that is the way it was done, not the easy way, but the way it had to be done. St. Edmund was the last Saxon King. To be honest, I believe that he was a good King; but I don't think we can say that all of the Saxons were great

The new Nike SB Apex "Indy" Pack features adidas' Superstar and Originals and is set to release in February. Inspired by the graphite suede and mesh energy of the iconic Nike SB logo, this collection will be made to bridge the gap between the old and new. The Nike SB Authentic will be reimagined in a black and denim-heavy color palette with an OG foil stamp and retro gum midsole. A premium leather overlay will cover the sides and a white leather outsole will sport traditional heel branding and old-school three stripe branding. Look for a release on February 2nd. Via Sole Collector.15th Street station (BMT Fourth Avenue Line) 15th Street was a station on the demolished BMT Fourth Avenue Line. It had two tracks and one side platform. The station opened on July 1, 1888, and had two side platforms and two tracks, serving an express and local station. It closed on June 23, 1938, after which the line was cut back to East Houston Street. Conventional large capacity transport trucks, such as tractor-trailers, are highly dangerous vehicles and pose a significant safety risk to those they are operating. This is particularly true when the tractor-trailer is pulling a heavy load, or when the driver is fatigued, under the influence of alcohol, or otherwise impaired. In the past, most efforts have been made to overcome these problems by improving the visibility of the tractor-trailer and/or adjusting the driver's cab to reduce fatigue. These are helpful, but not fully effective.
