If that is the case, are those pricing changes legal? and what will be the effect of this on current clients? Also, if the local market becomes a bit more competitive, will the minimum orders change? I am just trying to make sure that I do not get harrassed into any new contract or exorbitant pricing. A: To the extent that these price changes are due to market demand, they're in accordance with the agreement you entered into. As such, they're legal and cannot be harrassed. However, we can't really tell whether your "current clients" are on that contract or not; there's no way for us to know. If they're not, they may be subject to the new pricing when it comes to effect. Maier, et al, "Managing Sugar, Salt, and Fat Intakes in Low-Income Households: The Role of Social Norms and the Food Environment", Am J Public Health 99(9):1744-50 (September 2009). Fruit and vegetable consumption among low-income families continues to be of concern, despite increased awareness of healthy eating; in part, because there is a lack of evidence-based interventions to increase consumption. We conducted a 6-month randomized trial of a vignette-based intervention to increase fruit and vegetable consumption in low-income households in order to determine its effect on intake. Objective To assess the impact of two intervention modules designed to increase fruit and vegetable intake: one targeted exclusively to family members and one targeted to the community. Methods The intervention included five pairs of vignettes to be read by the participants in their homes. The vignettes were intended to increase awareness of the link between eating fruit and vegetables and reducing diabetes, hypertension and other chronic diseases. Participants were randomly assigned to one of two intervention modules, with assessments conducted at baseline, 3, 6 and 12 months after baseline. Results We enrolled 84 subjects over the 12-month study. The intervention was well received, with approximately 80% of participants completing the entire program. After 3 months, and at 12 months follow-up, participants assigned to the family module reduced on average their salt intake by 0.51 g/d, which was significantly higher than the reduction in salt intake reported by the control group; the group assigned to the community module reduced their salt intake by 1.24 g/d, which was not significant.
