It is a historic district of historic architecture. The 2.5 km-long street is anchored by the city's Central Square. The oldest buildings in Honoré date back to the Spanish colonial period. The neighborhood is mostly occupied by commercial buildings, and features many antique stores, restaurants and bars. But in a surprising turn, it looks like the bigwigs are reaching out to authors directly, to tell them that authors don't need a publisher. On the one hand, it's good to see that they're all seeing the big picture. On the other hand, I'm still a bit annoyed by the fact that they're asking authors to give up a valuable service: getting a book to market, before it is too late. Until today. Earlier this morning, I
