Hello! When you're living abroad, it's easy to spend a lot of time working, or taking care of your child, and not having much time left for doing the things that make you happy and healthy. I recently had the opportunity to work for the German Institute for International Educational Policy (DIP - Deutscher Institut für Internationale Pädagogik). It's a small non-profit organization, dedicated to promoting and advancing educational cooperation between Germany and other countries. The assignment that I was working on is called the "German-Brazilian Business Education Network". It aims to promote German-Brazilian business education cooperation in Brazil. It's important to learn some basic Portuguese before coming to Brazil to be able to communicate with other Germans. That's where the German Institute for International Educational Policy comes in. They offer a program called "German Language & Culture in Brazil" which consists of four weekly intensive classes in German language (each course lasts three hours). After the courses are over, participants will be given the opportunity to take German language classes at their own pace. There are also classes
